"Tattoo"

Created by the Spanish artist, Jaume Plensa, this 9-foot sculpture is made of polyester resin and stainless steel. Lighting up the newly designed West Campus plaza, the statue is "tattooed" with questions inspired by a children's geography book: "What is a mountain? What is a river? What is ice?"

Career Advising Team

The Career Advising Team (CATs) is a group of para-professional Duke students trained to help with various aspects of the job search process. CATs can assist with critiquing resumes and cover letters, advising on how to use pertinent resources, devising strategies, creating a job search timetable and much more. CATs go through extensive training with Career Center advisors to be able to give quality advice.

Project Wild

Project WILD is a pre-orientation backpacking program that takes incoming freshman to Pisgah National Forest in western North Carolina. The group was founded in 1974 and has been dedicated to the promotion of experiential education and leadership development ever since. Project WILD is staffed and run by students with the goal of creating an outdoor experience that stimulates both the minds and bodies of new students, helping them prepare for the transition to university life. In addition to the August trip for incoming freshman, Project WILD also teaches a House Course in the spring semester that includes a week-long trip during spring break. The organization aims to create a community based on trust and respect where students can grow through shared experiences while simultaneously creating positive change.

Duke Symphony Orchestra

Over the years, the Duke Symphony Orchestra has grown from a small chamber group to an organization over 100 members strong. Musicians are drawn from the Duke student body and the surrounding university community, consisting primarily of undergraduate student membership. Led by music director Harry Davidson, the DSO seeks to create an exciting and enlivening environment for concertgoers and performers alike. The musical repertoire of the orchestra ranges from the eighteenth to the twentieth century and includes both well-known masterpieces and rarely-heard works. This talented group hosts four concerts in Baldwin Auditorium every season, with more than 2000 audience attendees in this year alone. In addition, the DSO can be seen performing at other university events, including a performance in Duke Chapel during Family Weekend. This season, the DSO celebrated the works of Mozart and Shostakovich in honor of the composers' 250th and 100th birth year anniversaries, respectively. A highlight of the season was a trip to Beaufort, SC to perform a benefit concert for Beaufort Memorial Hospital's Keyserling Cancer Center.

Out of the Blue

Duke Out of the Blue (OOTB), founded in 1980, is Duke University's oldest female a cappella group, which performs in concerts around campus throughout the year for a variety of audiences and events. The group travels together over fall break, and works hard all year to record and produce a professional, studio-recorded CD. OOTB is the proud recipient of a variety of awards, including "Best Female Collegiate Album," "Best Soloist," "Best Song," and "Best Arrangement" from the Contemporary A cappella Society. OOTB's songs are also featured on several national collegiate compilations, such as the "Best of College A Cappella" series and "Voice Only." The girls of OOTB sadly said goodbye to five seniors in spring 2007: Theresa Mohin, Brandi Feemster, Flora MacIvor, Katie Koval, and Jessica Goodyear. The group is looking forward to the 07-08 academic year, however, when its twelfth album, "Pitch Please," will be released.

Duke Royale

The Duke University Union threw a spring party in the gardens titled "Duke Royale," enticing students with rich hor d'oerves and drinks. The semi-formal event was a success, much like Duke-Plays and the Nasher Noir, promising a little glitz and glamour for the everyday Duke student.

DukePlays: The Party! For their second event, DukePlay celebrated Old Duke with an upscale party held in the leas conventional of locations: the library. Bostock presented several bands, von der Heyden hosted a coffee bar, and Perkin featured a booth where students could collect vintage playing cards and pins. Photo montages on the walls displaye pictures from years past celebrating arts, athletics, activism and romance. Students, faculty, and members of the Board o Trustees all mingled while sampling a wide array of dessert inspired by the 1940's. Organizers Rachel Weeks and Hale Hoffman declared the party a success at entertaining student while asking them consider the meaning of campus culture

Football

The Duke football team endured a tough year, finishing 0-8 in the ACC and 0-12 overall. Highlights of the season included near victories against North Carolina and Wake Forest, the eventual ACC Champion. Especially noteworthy was Duke's performance during the UNC game, where senior Patrick Bailey returned an interception for a touchdown with under three minutes on the clock. Unfortunately, Duke lost 45-44 after the extra point was blocked.

The 2006-2007 season was the last for senior John Talley, who received first-team All-ACC honors for the second consecutive year. Notably, Talley had the most interceptions in the AC season (7), and holds a number of Duke records including interceptions (18).

Despite head coach Ted Roof's 5-34 record at Duke, Roof faithfuls conspicuously attended every home game, behind the bench with a sign proclaiming them as " Rough Riders." At the end of the season, almost 200 f alumni attended the "Duke Football Summit" to disc program.

JASON MRAZ REHEARSES AT THE EAST CAMPUS COFFEE HOUSE

A spontaneous invitation to Jason Mraz' rehearsal in the Coffee House allowed 200 students the opportunity to see Mraz practice before his LDOC show Mraz introduced himself as Mason, "the best Jason Mraz cover artist ever," but once the show began, it was obvious this singer was no impersonator. Mraz didn't only perform early, free of charge, but also allowed fans to request their favorite songs.

Five Women

In 1946 a tradition began involving the photo-documentation of five Duke women. The tradition continued 30 years later, in 1976, when a photo demonstrating the increasing diversity of women on Duke's campus was taken. This year, 60 years after the original snapshot, five women were photographed once again, walking through the Clock Tower Quad. A contest was held by the Women's Center and the Mary Lou Williams Center for Black Culture to allow all members of the Duke community to contribute to this tradition. Matt Campbell's winning photo sustains this ritual and exhibits how although Duke's architecture may remain constant over time, her women are forever changing.

The French Family Science Center

280,000 square feet of new space for teaching and research were added to Duke's campus this year. The French Family Science Center was named in honor of Melinda French Gates, a former student of Duke University. The building construction and renovation, performed with the help of a $30 million dollar donation from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, will house the chemistry and biology departments and provide additional space for the departments of biological anthropology and anatomy, mathematics and physics.
